EDITED ANNUALLY BY THE FRATERNITIES

OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI

Dedication

To him who has done so much for his native state, and who has come to us as the harbinger of a new and better day, when Mississippi's greatest educational institution shall take her rightful place in the state and nation; to Mississippi's greatest educator, and our beloved Chancellor Andrew Armstrong Kincaid, this volume is lovingly and respectfully dedicated. : : : : :

Chancellor Andrew Armstrong Kincannon

Over obstacles that few could have surmounted, overcoming opposition at every step that would have daunted a less manly soul, Andrew Armstrong Kincannon has written his name large at the top of the roll of Mississippi educators. The very utterance of the name suggests the strength and resolute-ness of him who bears it, and reminds those who have watched with admiration his steady, upward stride to state and national reputation that the real strength of the man and the chief element of his success has been, not so much his vigorous intellect and clear insight into men and measures, important as these have been, but rather a great, warm heart which has enfolded his State, and uniting with his indomitable will, has made to him no service too arduous, no sacrifice too great in behalf of the sons and daughters of Mississippi. Space permits a mere outline sketch of a life unusually full of beneficence and honors.

Born in Noxubee county amid the gloom and disaster of the early sixties, educated in Lee county in the days of reconstruction, revolution and financial reverses, Andrew Armstrong Kincannon, the second son of James and M. A. Kincannon, early learned the lessons of self-help and self-denial. The impress of both father and mother are easily discernible in his character, and his devotion to his parents and to his brothers and sisters has ever been strikingly manifest.

From the Verona High School, where he was the pupil of both Drs. Deupree and Leavell, of the University faculty, he went to the State University. At the University he was elected anniversarian in the Phi Sigma Literary Society, but resigned and afterward urged a change in the method of selecting the anniversarian. From the University he went to the Normal University, Lebanon, Ohio, from which institution he took both the A. B. and M. S. degrees. At the University and in his difficult early years as teacher in the Verona High School, where he had been a pupil, he gave evidence of that executive ability for which he has later become distinguished.

Three valuable years were spent as assistant professor of English at the Mississippi A. & M. College, under the immediate direction of that prince of English teachers, Prof. W. H. Magruder, and under the general supervision and friendly counsel of Gen. Stephen D. Lee, well termed the "father of industrial education in the South." In 1886, as superintendent of Meridian Public Schools, A. A. Kineannon came into prominence as a leader in the educational awakening and re-organization of the common schools of the State. He found in Meridian a single, disorganized, unequipped school; in ten years he added five schools and developed a popular, well articulated city school system. During this period his influence in the State Teachers' Association and in county institutes was notably weighty in the promotion of various reforms, and naturally so, being as he was, the founder and head of the first and largest city school system in the State.

It should be mentioned that in 1888, an epoch in his life was made when he was united in marriage with Miss Mary George Barksdale, daughter of William R. Barksdale, of Grenada, Miss., and oldest grandchild of Senator J. Z. George. Thus added incentive to effort came into his life, and with it the sympathy and encouragement of a wife who has always entered fully into his plans and has often proven herself singularly wise and timely in her counsel.

In 1895, after a brilliant canvass, in which he triumphed over a political combination that seemed invincible, Mr. Kineannon was nominated by acclamation for State Superintendent of Education by the largest Democratic convention ever assembled in Mississippi. In spite of the strong sentiment in the Legislature of 1896 favoring the reduction of the common school fund, the appropriation committee recommending only $700,000, Superintendent Kineannon succeeded in inducing the Legislature to increase the appropriation to $950,000 per annum, and secured also an increased appropriation for summer normals. Of the wholesome school laws that bear his impress mention will be made of only one, the creation of the State Board of Examiners, generally conceded by the best authorities to be a wise statute. His reports as State Superintendent of Education to the Legislature attracted wide attention on account of their excellence both in subject matter and in style. Favorable criticism was evoked from the leading school journals of the United States.

Meanwhile the Industrial Institute and College for the white girls of the State, having passed through years of internal discord and weakness of administration, had reached a crisis in its history. Doubtful, indeed, if the Legislature would appropriate funds for its support, as matters then stood. Governor McLaurin, Bishop Galloway and other members of the board of trustees urged Superintendent Kineannon as a patriotic Mississippian to accept the presidency of the college and save the institution. With his plans for the public school system but beginning to be developed, and expecting no call to other work for years to come, Superintendent Kineannon reluctantly resigned his State office and accepted the presidency of the I. I. & C., having been unanimously elected by the board of trustees, responding to the call of duty and the claims of the girls of Mississippi, as the board presented the case to him. The transformation at once wrought in the college, the doubling in a few years of its faculty and student body, the addition of building after building, and the ready response of successive Legislatures to President Kineannon's eloquent appeals for funds to meet the increasing needs of the great institution, fondly proclaimed by Governor Vardaman and others "the pride of the State," are facts as far famed as the institution, attesting how efficiently President Kineannon met the great demands made upon him, and far surpassed the expectations of the board and even the best of his friends. So distinguished have been his services to the I. I. & C. that repeatedly has he been called to similar positions in other States. But these have moved him little, for his own State duty and affection have held him inflexibly firm, supremely loyal.

In November, 1906, he was called to the chancellorship of the State University, but declined to accept it for reasons satisfactory to himself. In June, last, Mr. Kineannon was again elected to the chancellorship of the University, and after having had more power conferred upon him than heretofore given to any chancellor, he accepted it. Recently the University of Arkansas conferred upon him the title of LL. D. He has more than fulfilled our expectations and bids fair to place the University of Mississippi high in the educational roll of the country.

LYCEUM BUILDING

THE LILY AND THE ROSE.

A lily white and stately
And a rose of gorgeous red,
Were nodding quite sedately
In a scented flow'r bed.

Quoth the lily white, serenely,
To the rose of blood's own red,
"Soon we shall lie supinely
In common dust, here, dead."

Replied the red rose, gladly,
"To die with thee were sweet;
I love thee, fair one, madly—
I fain would kiss thy feet."

Quoth the lily fair, most coldly,
"Thy passion's hot desire,
And uttered thus so boldly,
Breathes fierce as hell's own fire."

"I want sweet admiration,
As pure as Heaven's snow—
No frenzied adoration—
No flush of poppy's glow."

Then quoth the red rose, sadly,
"To mate with thee on earth
Hath been my passion, madly
Nurtured since my birth."

"But since, thou pretty creature,
Thy being holds no blood,
The passion in my nature
Would drown thee in its flood."

Not e'en a tear of sorrow
Graced the lily's marble cheek;
Nor did she hope the morrow
Would heal the rose's pique.

The rose grew limp with sadness
And murmured soft and low:
"Tis meet, this, for my madness—
Hell's blasts ne'er warmed the snow."

Consider the Lilies

*I love to watch the graceful
lilies grow,
As day by day they raise their
drooping heads;
I would that I the unseen
power might know,
That lifts them from their
lowly beds,
And weaves their petals white
of silver threads.
Though this, I fear, a thing
forever sealed,
Till heaven itself and truth
shall be revealed.*

DELTA KAPPA EPSILON FRATERNITY

The Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity was founded at Yale University, June 22, 1844. It was the purpose of the charter members to have only a local club, but opportunity soon arose to place the fraternity in Maine, Princeton following closely, and soon thereafter the fraternity began to organize chapters in several of the States, both in the North and South.

Many of its sons have obtained distinction in both houses of Congress, in Literature and in Athletics, Walter Camp and Robert J. Cook being authorities on College Athletics.

The first convention of the fraternity was held at New Haven, in 1846, and since then, with a few exceptions, conventions have been held annually at different places throughout the United States.

The Delta Kappa Epsilon Quarterly is edited by the Council of the Fraternity, located at 1135 Broadway, New York City. The Quarterly serves the purpose of keeping all the Chapters in touch with each other, and giving to its members those things most interesting in fraternity life.

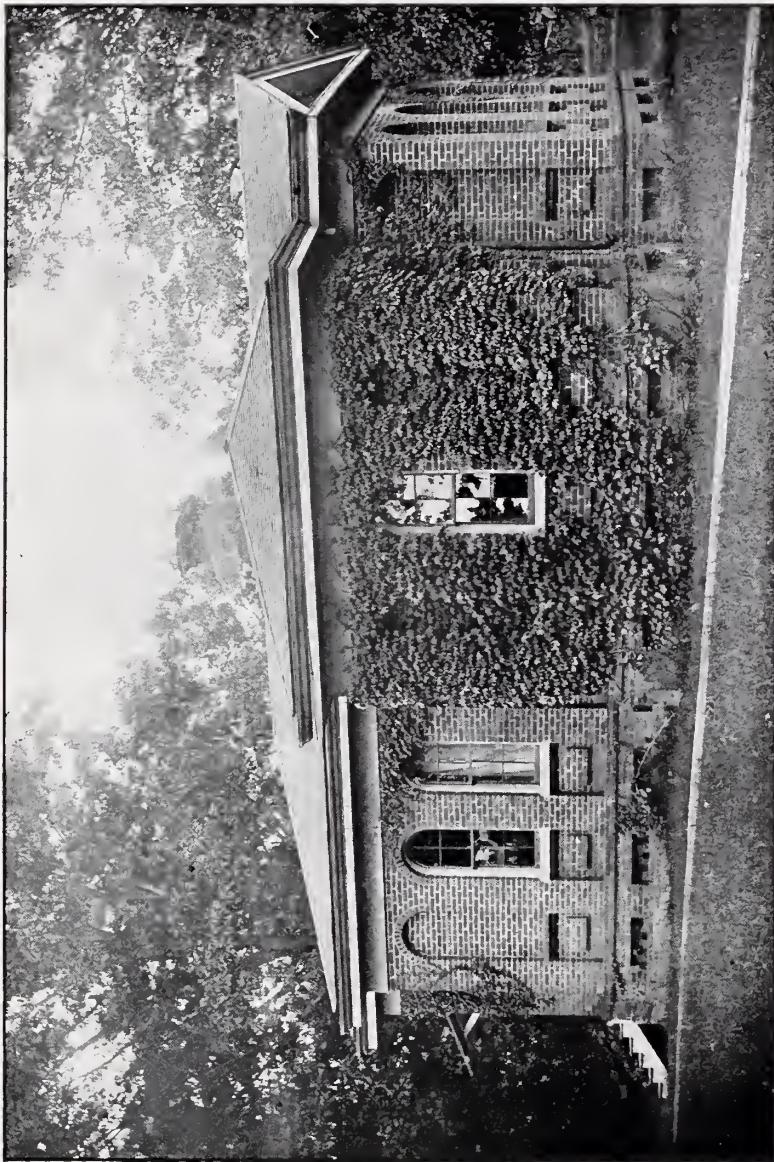

Down to 1881 the government of the fraternity was in the hands of the convention exclusively. In 1882 an Advisory Council was formed, and the administration of the fraternity's affairs was placed in its hands.

Chi Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon was founded at the University of Mississippi, April 14, 1850, being the first fraternity founded at the university. From the date of its birth Chi Chapter enjoyed prosperous years continuously until the beginning of the Civil War, the active members enlisting in the Confederate army in 1861. During the five years of war its members fought most valiantly for the cause of the Confederacy. After the war, in the year 1867, Chi took new life and began upon its work, determined in 1850.

From 1867 Chi has been one of the most active fraternities at the University.

In 1900 she celebrated her semi-centennial in the town of Oxford, Miss., by giving her alumni members a banquet and dance, several of her sons from all classes since 1850 being present at that time.

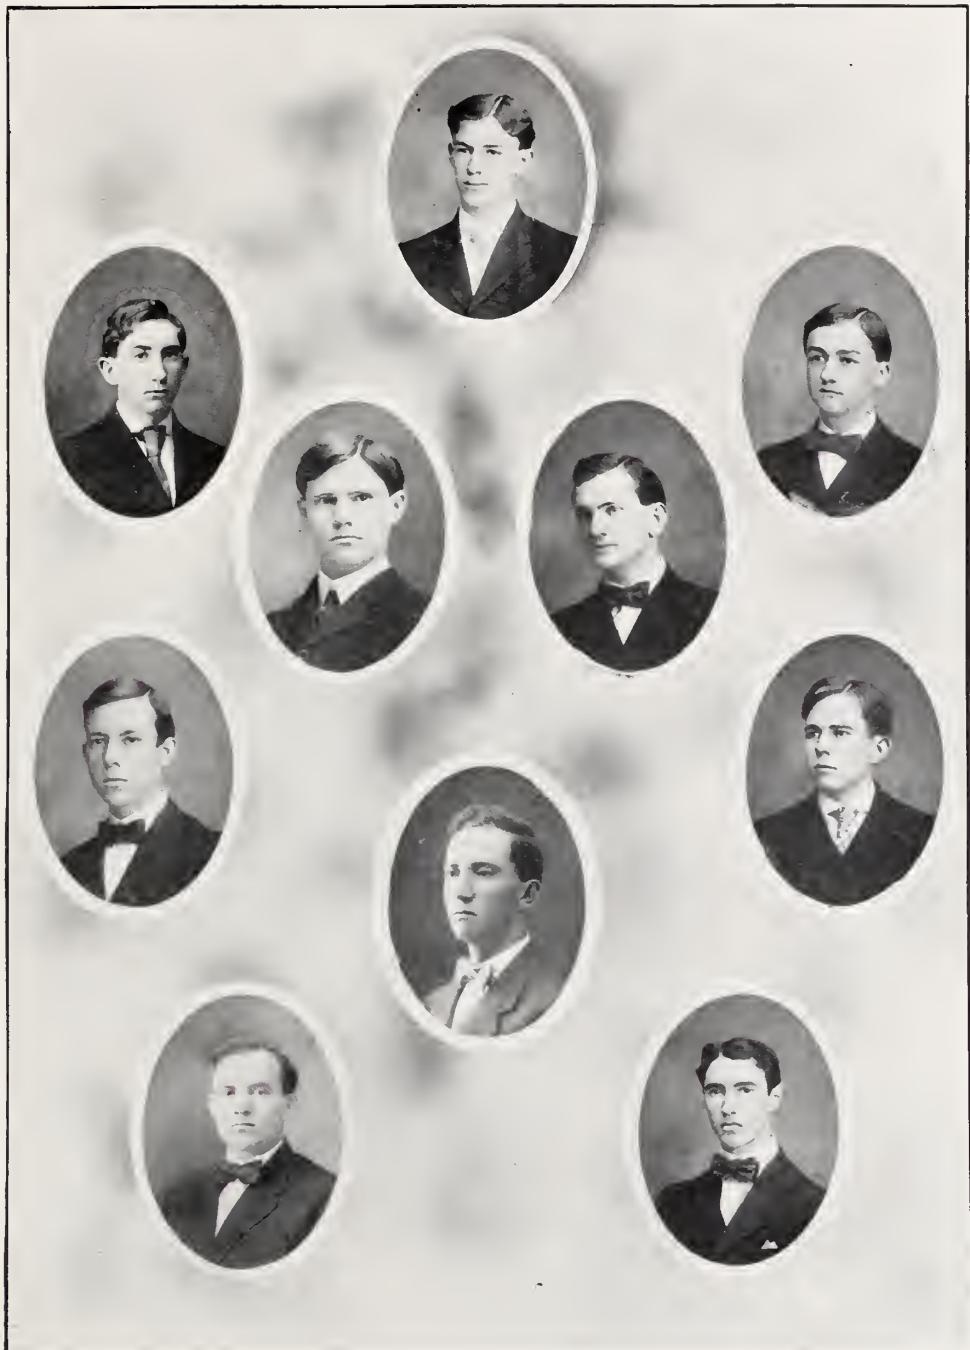

In 1901 Chi obtained a chapter house on the campus, which is her present domicile. The members of Chi Chapter as well as of other chapters of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, take part in everything that goes to make up college life, and Chi has had the good fortune of getting a good share of the laurels won on the gridiron, on the diamond, in the class honors and literary prizes.

DELTA PSI FRATERNITY

The Fraternity of Delta Psi was founded in Columbia College, New York City, in 1847.

Soon after foundation chapters were established in the following colleges: Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.; Burlington College, Burlington, N. J.; Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.; South Carolina College, Columbia, S. C.; Princeton College, Princeton, N. J.; Rochester University, Rochester, N. Y.; Brown University, Providence, R. I.; Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.; Randolph and Macon College, Boydton, Va.; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.; University of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss.; Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn.; University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.; Yale University, New Haven, Conn.; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, Mass.

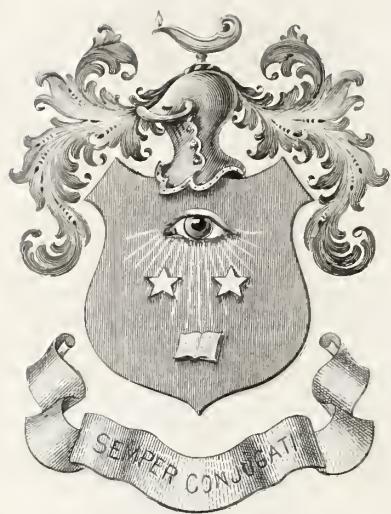

All of these chapters flourished until the outbreak of the Civil War, at which time all of the Southern colleges suspended exercises and the chapters were declared extinct. Upon the opening of the Southern colleges after the war the chapters at the Universities of Virginia and Mississippi were revived; the other Southern chapters were not.

Phi Chapter at the University of Mississippi was founded in 1855, and at the beginning of the Civil War had initiated one hundred and two men. During the war the exercises at the University were suspended and there were no initiates, but upon the reopening of school the chapter again began to flourish, and since the war has initiated three hundred and fifty men.

Phi has been very fortunate in having among her members some of the most prominent of the Alumni of the University of Mississippi, among who may be mentioned the following: Bishop Chas. B. Galloway, Gen. Luke E. Wright, Hon. H. D. Money, Hon. Joseph W. Bailey, Hon. W. V. Sullivan, Hon. T. C. Catchings, Hon. Leroy B. Valliant, Hon. Samuel H. Terrell, Hon. Thos. H. Woods, Hon. Sol. S. PHI KAPPA PSI FRATERNITY.

The Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity was founded at Washington and Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa., on February 19, 1852, by Charles P. T. Moore and W. H. Letterman. The first branch to be established was Virginia Alpha, in 1853. By 1861 seventeen chapters had been established. At the outbreak of the Civil War all the Southern chapters became extinct, and of the total membership of the fraternity, 600, 452 enlisted in this bloody conflict.

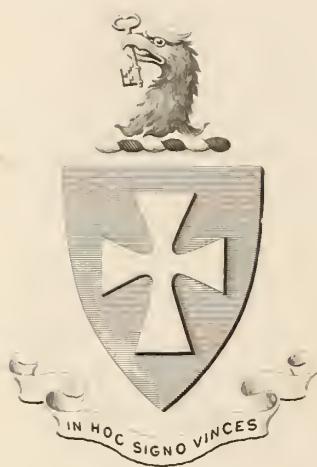

After the war several of the Southern chapters were reorganized and the fraternity has gradually expanded, until it now has forty-three active chapters and thirty-five Alumni Associations, with a total membership of over 10,000. The fraternity is governed by a bi-annual Grand Arch Council and an Executive Council, and five bi-annual District Councils. The next Grand Arch Council is to be held in Denver, Colorado, beginning July 1. The last was held in Washington, D. C., in 1906. The publication of the fraternity is called "The Shield," from the shape of the badge. It is published seven times a year, and is one of the most successful of all fraternity journals. The colors of the fraternity are pink and lavender, and the flower is the sweet pea.

Prior to the Civil War two chapters were established in Mississippi, the first at University of Mississippi, in November, 1857, and the second at Mississippi College, in the spring of 1861. Mississippi Alpha was established by John Baxter Payne, a member of Virginia Beta, Washington and Lee University, and Mississippi Beta by F. W. Johns, of Mississippi Alpha, now a planter at Madison, Miss. Only the charter members of the Mississippi College Chapter were initiated on account of the war. All but two of these were killed in the conflict and the chapter was never revived. Of the thirty-seven members of Mississippi Alpha, all enlisted in the Confederate service.

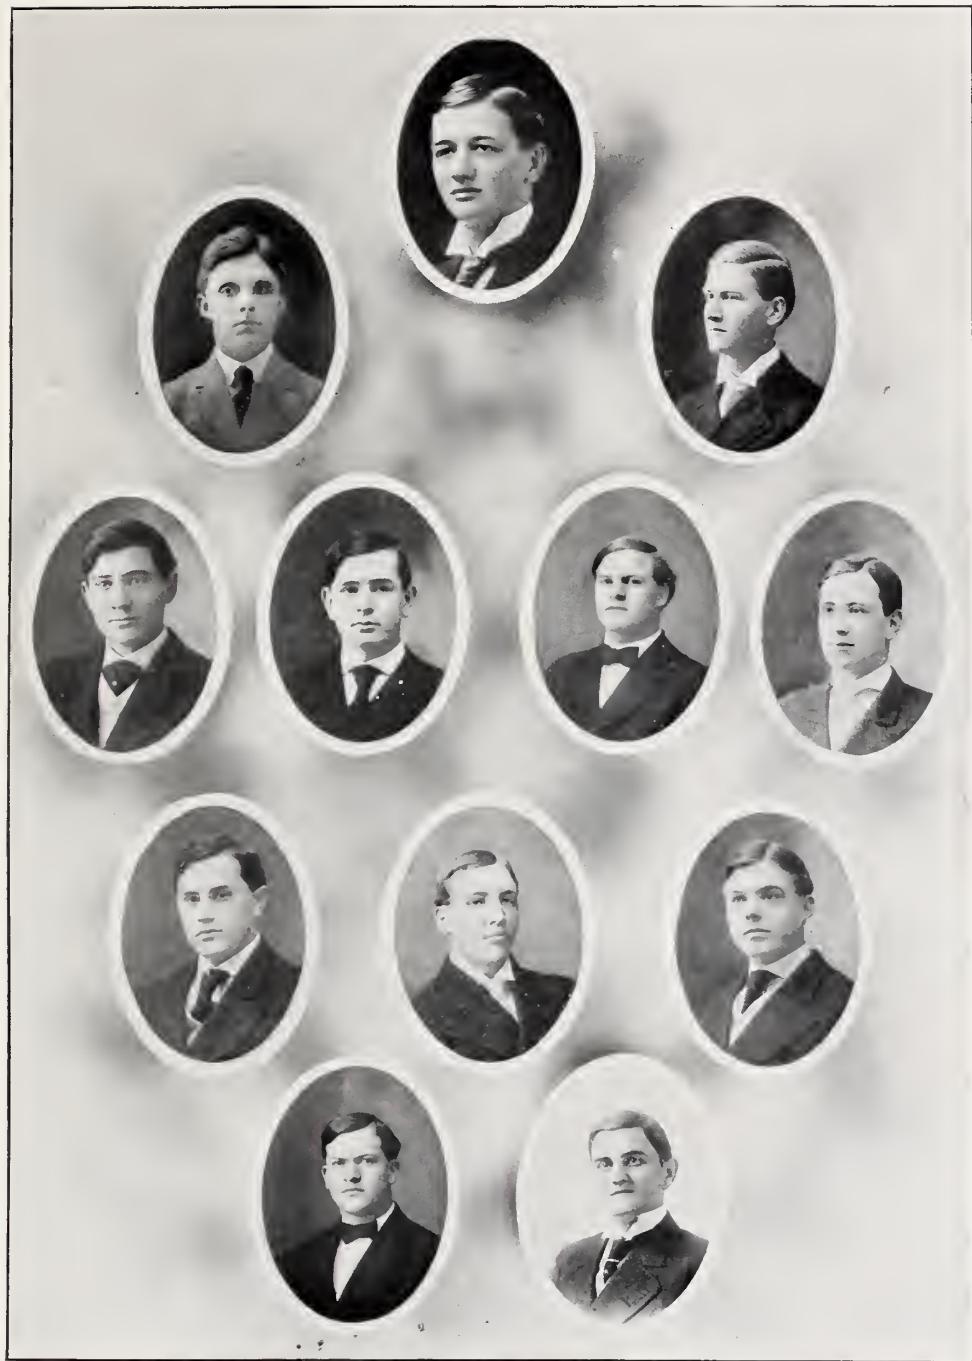

After the war the chapter was inactive until the fall of 1881, when it was revived and has since continued active. Since its establishment the chapter has initiated 192 men, prominent among whom are Dr. S. S. Carter, Jackson, Miss.; W. P. Tackett, Lexington; J. R. Tackett, Meridian; John L. Buckley, Enterprise; W. F. Tucker, Woodville; W. J. East, Senatobia; L. J. Farley, Hernando; M. E. Denton, Belen; Judge W. F. Stevens, Carrollton*; H. D. Stevens, New Albany; V. A. Griffith, Gulfport; G. G. Hurst, Oxford; G. G. Rencher, DeKalb.

Mississippi Alpha is in the Third District of the Fraternity, the other chapters of which are Maryland Alpha, Johns Hopkins; Virginia Alpha, University of Virginia; Virginia Beta, Washington and Lee; West Virginia Alpha, West Virginia University; Tennessee Delta, Vanderbilt, and Texas Alpha, University of Texas.

SIGMA CHI FRATERNITY.

Colors: Old Gold and Blue.

Flower: The White Rose.

Publications: "Sigma Chi Quarterly," and "Bulletin."

The Sigma Chi Fraternity was founded at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, on June 20, 1855, by Isaac M. Jordan, B. P. Runkle, Jas. F. Caldwell, F. H. Scobey, D. W. Cooper, T. C. Bell and W. S. Lockwood. Its founding was the result of a split in one of the fraternities then existing at Miami. It is one of the Miami Triad, the other members being Phi Delta Theta and Beta Theta Pi.

The fraternity has nearly 10,000 alumni and fifty-seven active chapters, besides thirty alumni chapters. Only six chapters are in the South, Mississippi, Virginia, Vanderbilt, Tulane, Texas and Arkansas. The fraternity is stronger in the Mississippi Valley States than elsewhere, especially in the northernmost states of this section, Ohio for instance having six chapters of Sigma Chi within her borders, this being equalled only by Pennsylvania. New England has four chapters altogether. The attitude of the fraternity toward expansion is conservative, perhaps, having established only two chapters in the past three years, these being at Arkansas and Montana. About three-fourths of the chapters own houses.

The Sigma Chi Fraternity was but two years old when Eta Chapter came into existence, making the third chapter of the fraternity. It was the first chapter of the South, and the fourth in the University of Mississippi. The date of its installation was October 10, 1857. The organization of the chapter was due to the efforts of J. R. McIntosh, A. H. Gibson, W. T. McCann, Kennon McElroy, J. W. Buchanan and C. R. Myers.

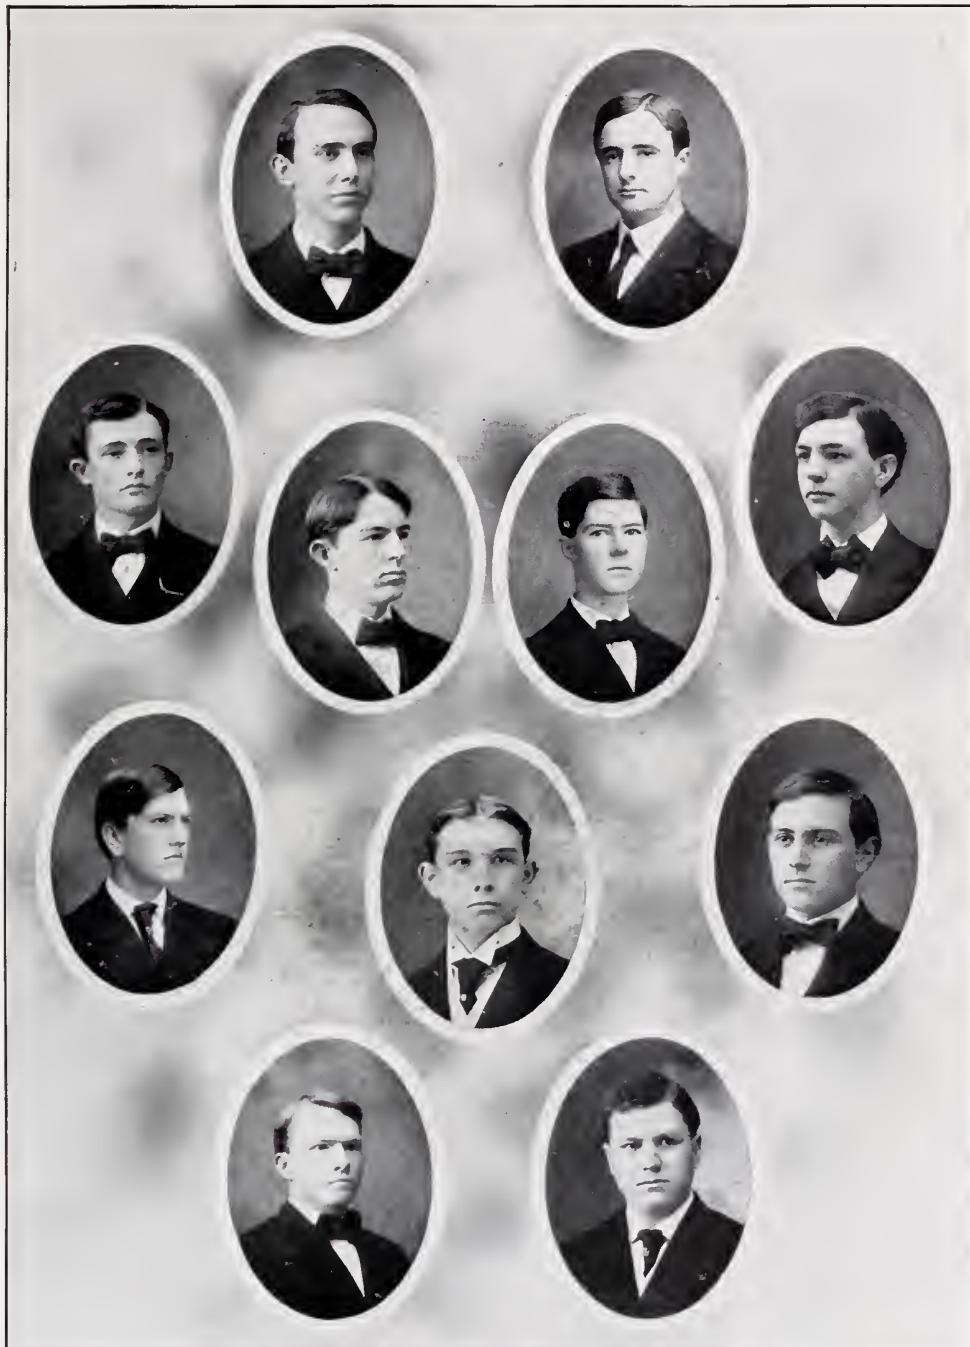

When the Civil War began and the roll of drums was heard in every college in the land, every member of Eta enlisted in the Army of the Confederacy, three-fourths of whom were killed or died in service. The chapter was reorganized directly after the close of the war by Patrick S. Myers, H. C. Myers, B. C. Adams, W. M. Forest, Wallace Wood and others. The Constantine Chapter, which was organized during the war, the members of which were soldiers of both armies, was founded by Hal Yerger, of Eta, and H. S. Dixon, of Psi.

Members of Eta have, at various times, founded seven other chapters of the fraternity, among them being the chapters at Washington and Lee and Virginia. Eta stands at the head of the Southern province of Sigma Chi. Among the prominent men of the chapter are found the names of Judge J. M. Liddell, now president of the Alumni Chapter in Manila, P. I.; Judge W. C. Martin, of Natchez; Judge Walter Malone, of Memphis; ex-Governor A. H. Longino; former Lieut.-Governor Harrison; W. A. Roane, present judge of this district; F. A. McLain, of Gloster, and Thos. Spight, of Ripley, both of whom are at present serving in the lower house of Congress.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON FRATERNITY.

Mississippi Gamma, the sixteenth chapter chartered by Σ A E, was established in May, 1866. It was founded by J. B. Manlove, of Vanderbilt University, and was the fifth National Fraternity to enter this University. There were six charter members, among whom were L. Q. C. Lamar and Judge C. B. Howry. The chapter became inactive in 1869, but was re-established in 1882. During the forty-two years of its existence it has initiated one hundred and sixty-one men. Prominent among its Alumni are L. Q. C. Lamar, C. B. Howry, U. S. Supreme Judge of Court of Claims; Champe Marshall, Supreme Court Judge of Missouri; Prof. J. W. Provine and C. B. Ames, of Oklahoma. Other prominent Σ A. E's in the State are T. U. Sisson, Judge Garrard Harris, D. H. Bishop and Murray F. Smith.

The fraternity was founded at the University of Alabama, March 8, 1856, by Noble Leslie DeVatie, who was the first man to lose his life in the Civil War. Only one of the founders is living, J. B. Rudolph, of Pleasant Hill, Ala. There are twenty-nine chapters in the South and forty-one in the North and West. The total number of initiated men is 14,000, 400 of whom are active. The governing body is a Supreme Council, but the seventy chapters are divided into nine provinces, which have a convention of their own. There are three publications, two of which are secret, and also forty-eight chapter houses.

There can be no regular chapter at West Point, but there are twelve Σ A E's who have formed a club there. The first Northern College to receive a charter from the fraternity was Gettysburg College, Pennsylvania, in 1883. There are forty-five Alumni Associations, the largest of which is Atlanta, Ga., with a membership of 500, and New York City next, with a membership of 450. The flower of the fraternity is the violet, and the colors are royal purple and old gold.

Phi Delta Theta was founded at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, December 26, 1848, by Robert Morrison, '49; John M. Wilson, '49; John W. Lindley, '50; Robert J. Drake, '50; Ardiyan W. Rodgers, '51, and Andrew W. Rodgers, '51, none of whom are now living.

During the first two years of its life, three additional charters were granted, and before the Civil War the chapter roll had grown to seventeen. Only one chapter—Michigan Alpha—was added during these four years of strife, though four became temporarily inactive. During its third decade—1869-1879—the fraternity entered thirty-four institutions, half of which were Southern; in the next—1879-1889—twenty-six chapters were chartered, being located in various sections. Thus it may be seen that 63 per cent. of its chapters were installed between 1869 and 1889. Charters have been granted to eight chapters during the present century.

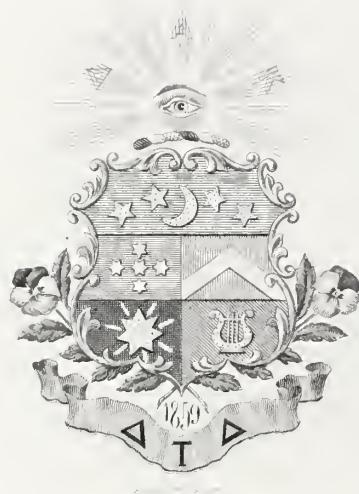

At present, Phi Delta Theta has seventy-one active chapters, seventy-five Alumni clubs (two of which are located in Mississippi, Greenwood and Meridian), and a membership of 17,000.

National conventions are held bi-ennially; alternating with them occur Province conventions.

Mississippi Alpha, the forty-seventh chapter, was organized after this manner. In February, 1877, Mr. W. B. Palmer, of the Georgia Beta Chapter, wrote Miss Kate Carothers, who afterwards married Judge B. T. Kimbrough, and asked that she recommend to him a young man suitable to organize a chapter here. This she did, having selected Enoch Asbury Enochs, '79, of Crystal Springs. After correspondence had been carried on for some time with Mr. Palmer, Mr. Enochs decided to accept the pledges of Phi Delta Theta, and solicited Messrs. W. J. Smith, '78; J. L. Harris, '80; J. M. Catchings, '81, and C. D. Butler, '83, to join with him in the petition for a charter. A charter was granted, and Mississippi Alpha of Phi Delta Theta was installed March 25, 1877. Since that time 237 men have become Phi's through the efforts of this chapter.

Miss Carothers was the only lady ever officially recognized by Mississippi Alpha, in that she was made an honorary member—the chapter endeavoring thus to show their appreciation of her efforts, which had resulted as stated above.

Prominent men of Mississippi Alpha: W. S. Hill, member of Congress; M. W. Beck, Georgia Supreme Court Judge; Monroe McClurg, ex-Attorney-General of Mississippi; E. T. Woolridge, U. S. Custom Service; W. A. Anderson, U. S. Custom Service; Stone Deavons, ex-Chancellor; C. L. Sively, General Counsel of Y. & M. V. Railroad, and Division Counsel of I. C. Railroad; L. M. Southworth, ex-Captain U. S. Army; W. A. McCain, First Lieutenant U. S. Cavalry; J. A. McCain, Ensign U. S. Navy; S. D. Neill, ex-District Attorney; J. G. Quckemeyer, Second Lieutenant U. S. Army.

The Delta Tau Delta Fraternity was founded at Bethany College, West Virginia, (then Virginia), May, 1859. The Alpha Chapter flourished for more than two years and was popular with faculty and students. In 1861, on account of the Civil War, it disbanded and the members went either to their respective homes or to the army. Prior to the suspension of the college three other chapters had been established: Beta, at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa.; Gamma, at West Liberty College, Virginia, and Delta, at Monongahela Academy. The Civil War was disastrous to Delta Tau Delta, every chapter being disorganized.

In 1862 Wm. H. Hinds returned to Washington College and found that all the members of his and the other chapters had gone to war or had failed to return to college. By his faithful efforts he revived all the chapters.

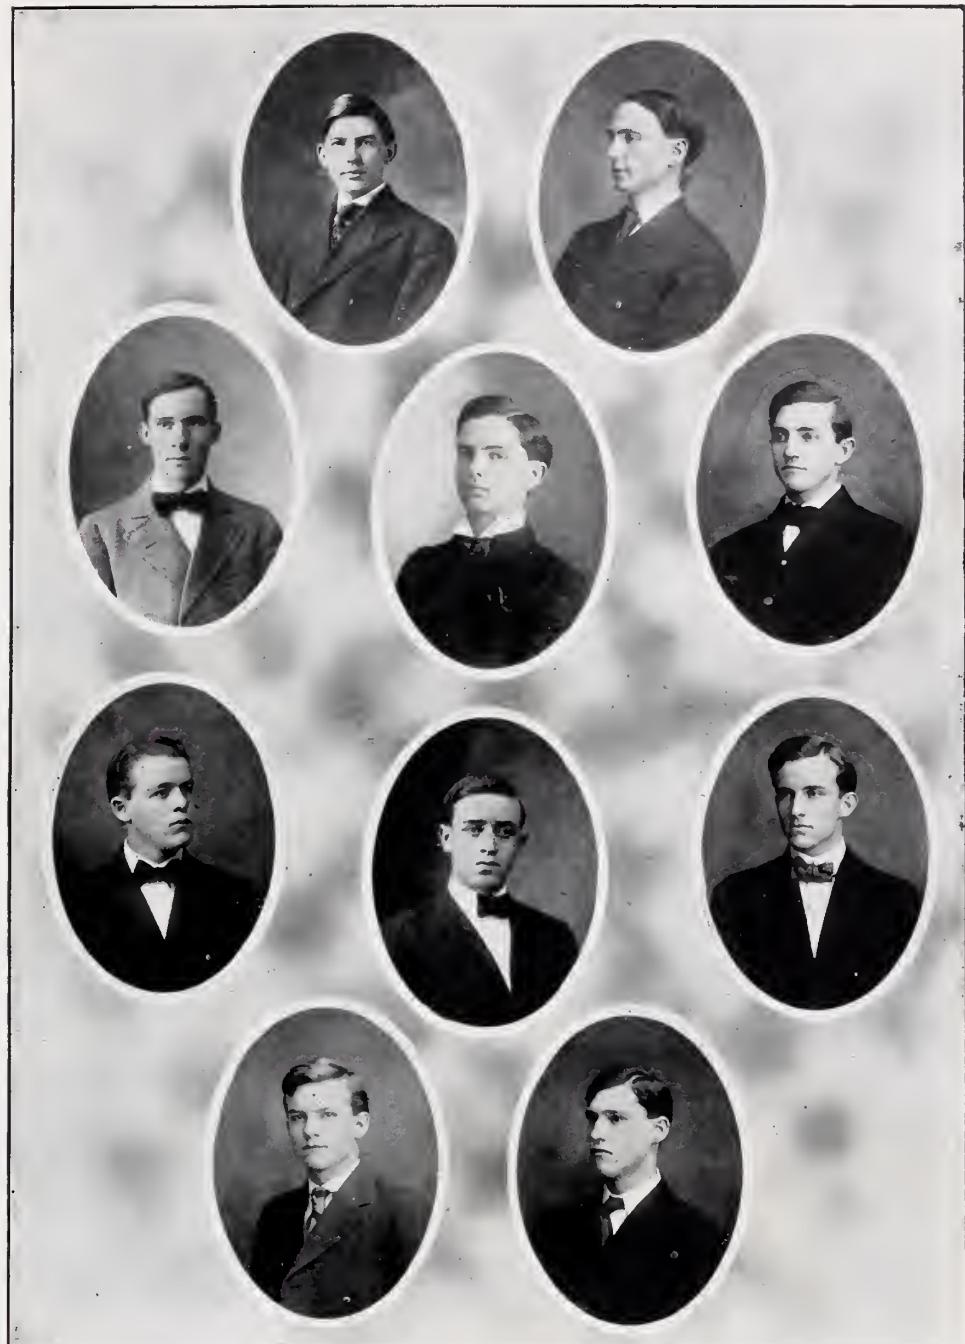

Pi Chapter of Delta Tau Delta was organized as S. A. Chapter of the Rainbow, or W. W. W. Fraternity, in 1848, at the University of Mississippi. This fraternity was strictly a Southern fraternity. It did not favor expansion and was never a fraternity of many chapters.

When the University closed on account of the war, the Rainbow Fraternity was disorganized, but on the re-opening of the University after the war the fraternity was re-established by John Horton McKie, of Oxford, Miss. During a varied career of thirty-five years the fraternity had adhered to the policy of non-extension, but about 1880 its views toward extension changed, and in January, 1886, it consolidated with the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity. At the time of consolidation there were but two chapters of the Rainbow Fraternity, at Mississippi and Vanderbilt.

Since 1886 Delta Tau Delta has grown very rapidly, having chapters in nearly all the large institutions of the United States, a total of fifty chapters.

Among the Alumni of Pi Chapter are to be found Congressman Ben Humphreys, of Greenwood; Chancellor A. A. Kincaid; Rev. P. T. Sears, Rector of Christ's Church, Houston, Texas; R. E. Wilbourn, City Attorney of Meridian, Miss., and J. M. McDowell, of Jackson, Miss.

KAPPA ALPHA FRATERNITY

(SOUTHERN.)

Colors: Old Gold and Crimson.

Flowers: Red Rose and Magnolia.

Publication: "Kappa Alpha Journal."

The Kappa Alpha Order (Southern) was founded at Washington College, now Washington and Lee University, in 1865, by a band of young men who had served in the armies of the South during the Civil War. The order, as its badge, the shield and the cross, signifies, is of a military-religious nature; and being founded by Confederate soldiers at the end of their struggle, is based on the chivalric principles so dear to the Southern gentleman. Naturally, the order is characteristically Southern, typifying the Age of Chivalry as it bloomed in Dixie before the war, and perpetuating its noble ideals to posterity. Its motto, "Dieu et les Dames," bespeaks its ideals; its Southern locality and traditions, the essence of its individuality.

The order has now fifty active chapters and sixty Alumni chapters.

Alpha Upsilon Chapter was founded at the University of Mississippi, January 12, 1900, by Marvin T. Ormond. Having existed only eight years, Alpha Upsilon's members are all very young men, and none have so far achieved any particular fame, save Bro. V. Otis Robertson, of Jackson, Miss., who, although but twenty-nine years old, has been elected Grand Historian of the order. The chapter roll to date has on it fifty-seven names. The numbers of men initiated by the chapter are for the eight years of its existence, as follows: 1900, seven; 1900-1901, nine; 1901-1902, seven; 1902-1903, five; 1903-1904, fourteen; 1904-1905, four; 1905-1906, three; 1906-1907, three; 1907-1908, five.

For the eight years the average chapter roll has been 13½ men.

Chi Omega was organized at the University of Arkansas, April 5, 1895, by Ina May Boles, Jobelle Holcomb, Alice Carey Simonds and Jeannie Maie Vinvenheller. They were assisted by Dr. Charles Richardson, who, in consideration of this service, was made the sole honorary member of the fraternity. There are twenty-one active chapters, extending from Maine to California, and from the Great Lakes to the Rio Grande. There are eleven alumnae chapters, the one in New York City representing ten chapters. The fraternity is also represented in Hawaii and in Cuba. The fraternity has a membership of 1,250. The next national convention meets in Chicago in June, 1908.

The constitution of Sigma Tau was adopted April 16, 1906. The fifteen charter members were: Annie J. Chandler, Minnie Smith (Mrs. W. J. Holt), Elizabeth Cowan, Alice M. Borchert, Julia Murry (Mrs. R. A. Cox), Anna Vineyard, Henrietta Coriune Little (Mrs. M. D. Templeton), Emma Borchert, Annie B. Wilson, Carrie B. Gary, Carrie Jones (Mrs. O. A. Hansbrough), Bertie L. Byrnes (Mrs. H. Hart), Beda Jorgerson*, Minnie H. Brown, Lynne B. West (Mrs. Hinton.)

On November 4, 1899, Sigma Tau was enrolled as Tau Chapter of Chi Omega, being the first national girls' fraternity introduced into the University of Mississippi. The members at the time of consolidation were Elizabeth Cowan, Julia Compton, Lynda Sultan, Helen Bridger (Mrs. W. W. Ellis), Fannie Mosby (Mrs. J. M. Farrier), Nan Meek*. The membership of Tau Chapter is sixty-six. In 1903, Edith Wardlaw of Tau was president of the General Fraternity.

Delta Delta Delta was founded at Boston University on Thanksgiving Eve, 1888, by Sarah Ida Shaw, Eleanor Doreas Pond, Florence Isabelle Stewart and Isabel Morgan Breed. They associated with them seventeen members of the lower classes, and with this as a nucleus the fraternity grew rapidly. There are at present twenty-three active chapters and seventeen Alumnae associations. There are three degrees, the Trident degree given to pledges, the Stars and Crescent degree given to college students, and the Graduate degree given to alumnae. The fraternity has a membership of about 1,400.

Tau Delta Theta was a local sorority, founded in 1896. September 22, 1904, Tau Delta Theta was installed as Chi Chapter of Delta Delta Delta.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

When fretful, fruitless toil of years,
And mad desire to satisfy the man,
Had mastered all the richer thought
With vain misgivings of some dire regret;
Then joy departed in a mist of tears,
And summoned sadness overshadowed all.

A slightest tremor bears a meaning deep
Beyond the sagest search of mortal mind,
When linked feelings mingle in a haze
Of subtle charms enwrought in kindred love.

A restful search it is that seeks to find
Amid the deeper depths of garnered joys
The endless train that leads in mystic way
Adown the vale of Sacrifice of Self
Into a way devoid of little selfish fears,
And filled in beauty with supernal might.

This essence of the spirit of a noble life,
When Nature's crushing forces lend a pall,
Sees hope and peace appear enwrapt in love,
Imbibing sweetness from the bitterest gall.

FROM THE BRIDGE.

O thou, that takest on the rose's tint,
Preserving still the glow of glory gone;
Thou western cloud that holdest the dying glint
 Of disappearing day.

I once did know thy purple colored light
To flame the seat of lofty thought, a throne,
Which shared with thee thine eminence of light
 Above the wayward way;

But now the sinking fire that doth reveal
So much of beauty lavished in the skies,
Illumes in earth what beauty would conceal,
 The fruits of mortal seeds.

If thou wouldest have a sunset, be the dawn
Of glory; thou like Milton, with his sightless eyes,
Must know the after-glow of glory gone,
 Forgetting man's misdeeds.

LA COMEDIENNE.

A maiden, so shy and blushing;
A boy quite manly and brave,
With a nature more pleasant than gushing,
A "Soph," 'twixt fool and a knave.

The scene is set on the campus,
The time, somewhere in the night;
The season, near on to commencement:
The trees in green livery are dight.

A sigh from the coy, gentle maiden;
A clutching about the boy's heart.
The air is gloomily laden
With sympathy—lovers must part.

The maiden says: "Jack, will you miss me?"
The boy looks downcast and wan:
His answer? "Not much—if you'll kiss me,"
And hers? "Oh, Je ne comprende."

THE FOUR AGES.

Every school's a heaven or hell,
And all the students devils or angels.
They have their hardships and successes,
And one boy in his career catches the mischief:
Its length being four years. At first, the freshman,
Busting and flunking from one day to another,
Green and seedy, just from mother's lap.
He is the butt of all amusement and the Joke of all the co-eds. And then he tries to Bug the profs; but, poor thing, all to no avail;
They only make fun of him. Then the Sophomore,
The wise fool and know-it-all of college,
Rushes the co-eds and displays his ignorance.
Trying to make himself prominent,
He becomes a real buttinsky. The third year steps
Into the peg-leg pants of the Junior,
With nose-glasses, pipe and swell brown derby.
His gaudy hose, without taste, correspond
Quite well to his empty brain; he deigns to Speak to under-classmen, and even thinks co-eds
Are dying to catch him. Last year of all
Which ends the college life of a student
Is the senior, the easiest of all, which stands for Wisdom, clothes, brains, conceit and, lastly, dignity.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

When, in the course of human events, it becomes my duty to record the great and noble deeds of the class of '08, I look with awful reverence upon the mighty career of this band of scholars, and wonder if the Eternal Fitness of Things has been observed when so unworthy a member has been delegated to make a final record of this illustrious group. I say final record and yet know the final record of these men and women will be written by a stronger hand than mine—it will be written by the hand of Destiny in bold letters upon the scroll of fame.

A complete history of this class would require many volumes, but, as I am limited by time and space, I cannot enumerate its triumphs in extenso. Each year during the four years of its career here, the class of '08 has furnished more athletic material than any other one class in the University. This in itself would give the class a place of importance in the athletic records, but when it happens that the captains of both foot ball and base ball teams for the past three years have been members of the class of '08, every one must admit that it is the most remarkable record ever made in University athletics.

At the beginning of the scholastic year of '07-'08, when the University seemed to be at its lowest ebb, and its discipline in great disrepute in the eyes of the State, the class of '08 immortalized its name at the University by taking the initiative in establishing the Honor System, or system of student government, which has done much to correct the wrong impression prevalent throughout the State.

In conclusion, I predict that among the members of the class of '08 there are future senators, governors, philosophers, novelists, poets—and I suppose there are a few good "plough-hands" among us, too.

SENIOR CLASS POEM.

When we look back on our school days, just about four years ago,
Then we think of all the good times and the days that are no mo'.
Many times we've met together, in the chapel and at class,
But these meetings will no longer be, for in nineteen eight we pass.

When as Freshmen to this school we came, just as green as we could be,
Every upper classman grimed at us and stretched his neck to see.
Now quite the opposite is true, since we've learned how to 'scape the ram,
We pacify the Soph when blue and much improve the Freshman's brain.

We're the models of the Juniors, and they look to us with pride,
As they ponder o'er the donkey and remember we don't "ride."
All the profs, think we are Shakespeares; that's the truth, for they are right.
We are great and always will be, both in daytime and at night.

We've done our share of all the work, and had a part in everything;
Some can speak and some can write; some can dance and others sing.
When we go out in the world, we are sure to 'rouse the nation,
For such renowned men as we will surely cause a great sensation.

On June the third comes our departure from the place we love so well,
Whose ground we trod four years each hour, at the ringing of the bell.
And now, "Ole Miss," good-bye to you, the class of nineteen eight must go.
We'll love the good times spent with you, and all the days that are no mo'.

SENIOR LAW HISTORY.

Here we are in 1908, Seniors!

By the wayside have dropped many, who at the dawn gave promise to accomplish much ere the day was o'er; but, lo! many of the noblest have survived and under the masterful leadership of such men as Hon. Clarence Lee Sively, Col. Falkner, Hon. John Elmo Holmes and Dr. Thomas H. Somerville, we have at last won a decisive victory over our old enemies, Blackstone, Greenleaf and Bispham, who in future life shall be our friends and helpmates.

Although the way has been, at times, almost devoid of roses and strewn with thorns, and many have had faint hearts, we stand today conquerors in the most magnanimous meaning of that word. None of us have had to wear blue glasses from too strenuous application, yet we have had no loafers, and, as a class, it might be said: "They were faithful to the last."

We must now bid good-bye to the classic walls which have been our shelter during the reign of such illustrious leaders as Mr. Holmes and Dr. Somerville, and direct our energy to a world which holds our destinies wrapped in its secret folds, to try and make as good an impression in the school of life, as we have at the dear old 'Varsity.

I feel that this statement of facts would most certainly be demurred to by the entire class, should I fail to pay a tribute to our Dean, whose untiring efforts have been the cause of our being able to enter the legal profession. Now, if we would be altruistic in the highest sense of the word, we must take off our hats to him who never "cut," but was faithful and ambitious for us even when the clouds of Failure hovered over us.

Should the three Fates come into my presence, and with the eloquence of Ratcliffe, try and persuade me that Niles and Morgan were not fit to sit upon the Supreme Bench, I would laugh them to scorn. Not even a jury of Junior law students could be convinced by the illustrious Cooper, or even by White, that Sledge would not some day make the halls of Congress ring with his eloquence and logic.

But eliminating those of whom I have made personal mention, we have a very good class. In all seriousness, the Historian wishes to say that he firmly believes that on the race-track of Life none of us will be left at the post and that none will be played as long shots.

JUNIOR CLASS HISTORY.

Class of proud Juniors, known of old—class whose loud praise will not decline—with in their mighty hands they hold dominion o'er Fresh and Soph so fine.—Under-classmen remind us yet, lest we forget; lest we forget! Mem'ry of Freshman English dies—Soph. Physies and the like depart; still stand records of our burnt sacrifice,—Though the books in ashes play their part.—Freshman Rhet'rie is with us yet, lest we forget; lest we forget!

Some of our number have fallen away,—Slain by terrible Soph-Math fire;—But Junior Hist'ry of today—Is joy of which we never tire!—Oh, final exams, spare us yet, lest we forget; lest we forget!—If in the future we should lose—That power which now keeps all in awe,—But boasting such as others use—Would be against all of our law.—Still, you can safely trust us yet, lest you forget; lest you forget!

—HISTORIAN.

JUNIOR CLASS POEM.

We are the class of "Naughty Nine,"
And, if you're asked how old are we,
The records say we're just turned three.
We are the class of "Naughty Nine."

We are the class of "Naughty Nine,"
Yet, strange to say, in three years' time,
By pressing on, from youth to prime,
Has climbed the class of "Naughty Nine."

We are the class of "Naughty Nine,"
All pruned and trimmed by professors wise;
We measure about one-half the size
Of the Freshman class of "Naughty Nine."

We are the class of "Naughty Nine,"
Though young and small, we boast of gain
Hard bought by toil, of brawn and brain,
And proud is the class of "Naughty Nine."

We are the class of "Naughty Nine,"
Though young, yet old; not big, but wise.
In wisdom's race we'll take the prize;
Long live the class of "Naughty Nine."

JUNIOR LAW HISTORY.

In the beginning was Mr. Holmes. There is no one in the State wiser, or more learned in law, and his hard work and earnestness have in a large measure tended to bring the class to its present standing.

In the beginning Mr. Holmes said: "Let there be a class," and there was a class; but the class was without form and void. But after about six days of labor, the class assumed a form and began in earnest the work laid out for them, and to fill the voids with the elementary principles of law. And there were more young statesmen to enroll in this class than in any previous class.

Furthermore, to show you we boast of quality as well as quantity, we have had a far less percentage of failures in the two conflicts gone by than any previous class of like calling in the University. Also, the new honor system, which is destined to benefit the morals of the school so much, and the organization of which is the greatest thing that has been accomplished in the University in a long time, had some of its main originators and propagators among this class.

In athletics our record is exceedingly bright. Four of our members were stars on the foot ball field; the organizer and captain of the Cross Country Club is one of this chosen body, and since his election the Club has assumed a large share in athletics; the manager of the Tennis Club is another of our celebrities, and since he assumed control our fame in that line has gone abroad. Several of our members are now out for the base ball team, and all with fair prospects.

And thus, in conclusion, we see that the men of this class, led by one of the best men in the State, are themselves leaders in all that is wise, all that is good, and, in fact, leaders in every phase of college life. How can you, gentle reader (if there be any), doubt for a moment the present greatness of this class, or form any other conclusion as to its future than of the very brightest?

SOPHOMORE HISTORY.

The University opened this year. Also, there was a number of Sophomores there. This noted aggregation of great men (called "Sophys" by our under-studies, the Freshmen) were large in numbers, and included among its members some of the men taking a leading part in college.

The Meeting of the Class.

Mr. Furr, President: "The class will please come to order. Mr. Baskin will please cease talking and throw away his gum. Mr. Gillespie, call the roll."

(Mr. E. E. Allen enters while roll is called, being late on account of the laborious task of combing his hair.)

Secretary Gillespie reports the following members absent on the following accounts:

Mr. Dulaney, chasing the squirrels.

Mr. Foose, hunting a pair of No. 11 shoes, Mr. W. A. Jones having borrowed his other pair to go to a country dance.

Mr. Knox, taking vocal lessons from a mule.

Miss Margaret Maxwell, out strolling (Seule.)

Mr. Phipps, running, in De Roy style, after Arithmetical Progression.

Mr. Whitfield, curling his hair.

Mr. Brickell, writing a book on "How to Become Beautiful."

President Furr arises and yells "Stop!" "Stop!" "Enough!"

Mr. D. N. Powers, the long and lanky person, enters just from a call to the Woman's Hall. Mr. Fuller arises to make a motion, but his voice is drowned out by the snoring of "Sleepy Grits" Rice.

President Furr rises and requests Mr. J. Lindsey to postpone the account of his Alaskan adventures. Mr. Conner makes a bright remark, and it is recorded and put away among the treasures of the Sophomore Class. Mr. Wynn, a great lover of mince pie, moved that we adjourn. Motion carried "tumultuously."

We have never had another meeting on account of being refused a place to have one.

"By the way, Mr. Treasurer, please pay the Y. M. C. A. for damage done to their hall last meeting."

But do not, gentle reader, judge us too harshly. Our path of life is just beginning to assume proportions, and we are faithfully striving to grasp our opportunities and make other Sophomore classes envious of our record.

—HISTORIAN.

SOPHOMORE CLASS POEM.

The oak does spring from out the acorn small;
From one small nut grows up the hickory tall,
And with its mighty branches casting down
A lofty glance, much ponders how the ground
Holds many fresher nuts, which lie half hid
In verdant grass, to nobler things forbid.
Then, fellow-classmen, in this triumphant hour,
With ours the glory, the kingdom and the power,
Let's sometimes think of this, our baser source,
And teasing Freshmen cease—when we're grown hoarse.

A Sophomore! What hate that word once brought Within our breasts! But time and serious thought
Made strong desire of hate, love of desire;
Through frosty mists thus dimly burns the fire,
Which brighter grows approached and brighter still,
When genial warmth removes the winter's chill.

To be a Sophomore is to be great;
That having been, and in nineteen and eight,
Means lasting fame. This prayer, O Muse, I raise,
That I may live to sing the immortal praise
Of these, Great Fortune's flock, this noble band,
Born but for riches, love and high command.

The hickory's tall, but taller must it grow.
Through Purgatory passed and tortures slow,
We've reached one heaven; other two remain
E'er Tantalus the elusive dip may gain.

Now may the days which are to come by far
Surpass our yesterdays. May friendship's star,
In after life and here, always ascend.
May blessings dreamed of on us all attend;
And if the awakenings from our golden dreams
Find not pure gold, yet may they see some gleams.

The Freshman's Hobby

FRESHMAN CLASS HISTORY

This is a secret—but I think this Class History business is quite a bother. You are expected, of course, to picture your own particular class as consisting of the best-looking, the smartest, in fact, the most illustrious class that has ever helped mark up the desks of "Ole Miss."

I shall be truthful—it isn't so. The crowd of boys and girls who came to the University for the first time on the nineteenth of September, nineteen hundred and seven, were as green, and as mortally afraid of doing something to show it, as were our present Sophomore friends the former year. Our class election was a grand success—all the upper classmen attended.

We are walking the same old paths with nothing truly out of the ordinary happening, except that it's the most fun in the world to be a Freshman, even if we are tormented and teased by our more experienced friends. (They seem to have skipped the Freshman Class.)

And, well, say—we will promise to do better next time.

—HISTORIAN.

FRESHMAN CLASS POEM.

(With apologies to Longfellow.)

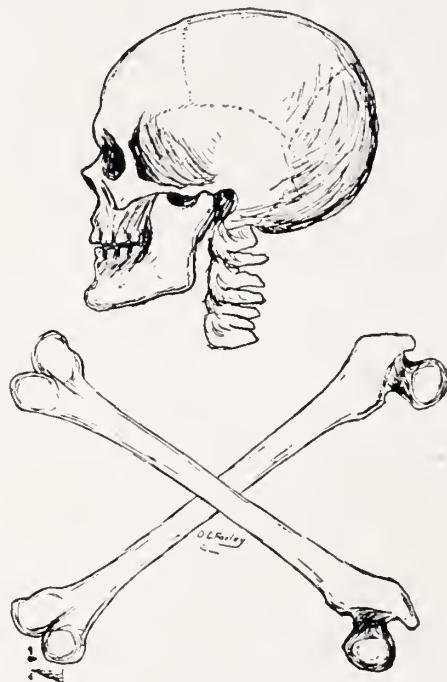

This is the class full of evil. The ignorant preps. and the Freshmen,
Bearded with down and of aspect green, huddled in the chapel,
Stand like quivering lambs, with voices hushed and trembling,
Stand like country gawks, with eyes that bulge with terror.
Loud from his seat in the rear the deep-voiced, towering Senior
Speaks, and in accents disconsolate answers the wail of the Freshmen.

This is the class full of evil; but where are the hopes which within it
Leaped and jumped when it thought of the Varsity?
Where is the old, red schoolhouse, the home of the simple Freshman—
Children whose lives were like those of the sheep in the meadows,
Never darkened by shadow of thought or of reason?
Gone is the schoolhouse and the Freshmen forever departed,
Scattered like dust and leaves before the march of the Seniors,
Who charge them and rush them and scatter them over the campus.
Naught but the class pin remains of the days of the high school.

Ye who believe in verdance that marks and discloses the Freshman;
Ye who believe in his ignorance and fear and his freshness,
Remember the tradition still sung by the class pin;
Remember the schoolhouse, once the home of the lordly Senior.

Visions and Dreams

Years have passed since I left you, my Alma Mater—years that seem to mark with clear-cut lines the transition from boyhood to full maturity. Years necessary for the growth of that which it is your aim to give life unto and then impetus.

Into your halls I timidly walked, a boy with a boy's dreams and a boy's ambitions. Out of your door I boldly passed, a man with a man's commission. At your altars I learned that which enabled me to obtain a clearer vision of Life—its duties and its responsibilities. From you I drew a nobler conception of my relation to my fellow-man, my Country and my God.

With your strong hand upon me I have grappled with the Eternal Problems. Your hand and God's assistance will enable me to solve them.

You are indeed a Mother; a Mother whose mission it is to gather us to your breast and to finish that instruction the Mothers of our birth began. In your lap I was nurtured for four happy years—a memory too sacred for oblivion; too dear for purchase.

You have served me well. You have endowed me with that of which I can only be robbed in conjunction with reason itself; and then for a mere span—the span from Earth to Heaven. Henceforth I shall serve you as best I can.

No longer permitted to dream for myself, I shall dream of the glad day when into your care and keeping I shall give those dreamers who bear my name.

May prosperity attend you. May you abound in blessings, as you abound in good works. May your good name be kept spotless, and your hall free from corruption. May no political clan or arbitrary power abuse you. May all of your institutions be kept intact, and all of your legends be jealously guarded.

IN MEMORIAM.

(J. B. W., '07.)

Tears, too weak for anguish, cease to flow,
And sorrow darkens with a fiercer pang,
While silent sadness shrouds our deeper woe
In Stygian shades beyond the empty power
Of us to penetrate.

Cold earth its heavy curtain now has drawn,
And folded close within her bosom deep
The mortal part of one, who living, lived
For nobler instincts, ripening to reap,
In virtues true a harvest.

The flaming meteor throws its lurid gleam
In transient glare along the pathless sky;
But thou hast left an imprint of a stronger life,
Which lingers in the hearts that knew thee by
The impulse of a soul.

Death reaches far, but cannot mar the soul;
'Tis only life begun to countless ages spread
For such as pass as passed our honored friend;
Refreshing in his noble mien and gentle graces shed,
As were made for brighter spheres.

This last tribute place we on his grave;
'Tis mean, but helpless man can do no more
For him whose spirit lingers in supernal day
Beyond the sighs and miseries and woes
Of life's vain, fleeting dreams.

My Visit to Mississippi University

Billy Shakespeare

Once, a long time ago, William Shakespeare, familiarly known to his friends as "Billy Shake," paid our University a visit. He was a congenial, happy lad, and was considered by the boys as a great sport and by the girls as quite a flirt. This boy was gifted with the pen, and after leaving he wrote a book, entitled "My Visit to Mississippi University," and I am going to reproduce that book for you, as nearly correctly as I can. It is as follows:

When I first reached the Mississippi campus I was very much attracted to the Woman's Hall, but especially attractive did I find its women. The very first day I was there I asked everybody the name of a fat, light-haired girl, who was always rushing over to the postoffice with a letter in her hand, and coming back with a different one. Finally I learned that she was Miss Pryor. Ah! I said, I'll entrap her. I gently took the letter from her hand, and said to her:

"Woman, thou art the earnest she alive,
If thou wilt lead all thy graces to the grave
And leave the world no copy."

Upon which the graceful creature laughed until she fell backward into a ditch. At that moment, standing near my side, was a pensive-looking maiden, whom I was told was Miss Pearl Middleton. I heard her sigh: "I cannot stand this; I've loved him from first sight." Forced to do something, I said: "Is thy little body tired of this great world?" She became very angry and asked me in a thundering voice what I said. I said: "O, dear Pearl, I am ill at these members; I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it——." But alas! the Dean appeared, and saying: "My daughter Carry and my daughter Annie Mai never listened to such infamous young men," jerked poor little Pearl into the house, and told Jessie Lee that she would have to eat the dark pieces of meat until school closed.

I was not so easily abashed, however, so I kept wandering around the campus. Finally I met Mrs. Butler, who asked me who I was. She said she didn't like tramps coming around the house very much. I told her I was very much interested in the Young Ladies at the Hall, so she asked me to sit down on the front steps with her, and she would answer any questions I might ask. We had no sooner seated ourselves than I saw a queer-looking little maiden appearing. "May I ask her name?" I asked. "This is Miss Byrnes, Mr. Shakespeare," followed. "May I ask your given name Miss Byrnes?" "Why, yes, Katherine." "Why, forsooth, you know, you know you are plain Kate." "Sir, my name is Katherine Byrnes; it has always been so; it always shall be, and you can't change it." "Ex-ex-euse me, Mademoiselle. I do not care to change——." "You need say no more; I furthermore give you to understand that my name is Katherine and not Mademoiselle."

Having been squeleched again I was silent, until I saw two little tots running in my direction. The kind Lady at my side said that they were Miss Dollye Patterson and Miss Ollie Cassell. "Ah!" I said; "they are like twin lambs that do frisk in the sun." But at that moment she left, thinking she heard the dinner-bell; but I discovered instead that it was Anna Bell. She was singing. I'll tip to the door and listen, I thought, but at that moment she turned and left me to an only resource in flattery. I screwed my courage to the sticking point, and said:

"I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again;
My ear is much enamoured of thy note,
So is mine eye enthralled of thy beauty,
And I swear at first view, I love thee."

Miss Terry: "You are entirely too forward for your years, Sir," and I heard her mutter to herself: : "If I had that young fellow by the neck, I would break his leg."

But the crucial moment had come to the days of my University course. It seemed to me that every girl at the Hall hated me forever, when one day I received a note from Miss Marguerite Wettin, asking me to please walk home from church with her the following Sunday. I did not know any way to get out of it, so I did it. As we were walking along I thought I might make a better impression if I talked about something befitting the day, therefore I bravely suggested "That David was a goodly King." Thank you, Sir," she said. "David is my brother. But when was he made King?" "Oh, well, never mind," I said, "do you like the University?" "Yes," she said; "and that reminds me that a girl at the Hall wants to see you about getting a prescription for her hair;" and, as we approached the building I saw Miss Carry Cozine waiting for me. She said her hair was getting so thin that she could not comb it, and she thought it was either the "Profs" or the gravy at the Hall. After a thorough examination, however, I assured her that it was neither, and told her that "This was no time to kick, when she was born bald-headed." Whereupon she screamed to the nearest girl to come to her rescue, and, when she arrived, scolding me severely, I simply said: "Miss Kitty, your hand might hurt me, but your voice couldn't hurt a flea." She got mad also, so I decided to leave Mississippi, and I must say I never met such a cross set of girls in my life; everything I said to them made them mad.

But as that old expression goes, "There are others," I find that I remember many girls and boys, whom I haven't yet mentioned; and I can think of no better way to close my book than by giving some quotations suitable to them, and also telling some jokes I heard on them while there:

Oliver Goldsmith said of Wallace McLeod: "A loud laugh speaks a vacant mind."

I saw this little verse of poetry in the Commercial Appeal about two of the students—I do not know who wrote it: Old King Cole said of Roger Montgomery:

"He is a long, lank soul,
And a long, lank soul is he.
While Tennyson said of Miss Stanback,
She is divinely tall and most divinely fair;
Would not they make a jolly good pair?"

Miss Lora Warren said that Mr. Charles Hightower made love as if he were shelling peas.

Dr. Jamie Acker called on a patient one day, and after an examination, he told her that "she didn't have any organic troubles, and asked whether she was worried mentally over anything. "Yes," she said, "I've been wondering from the looks of your mouth why you weren't a cat fish."

Mr. Ratcliffe: "Give me a pole long enough, a prop strong enough and I can move this whole world single-handed."

Rowan Haney: "There are lots of Orrs on earth; Sarah Orr, Jamie Orr, Bettie Orr, even if Kate Orr does intend being Mrs. Davis."

Landlady to Walter Trotter: "Why do you put butter in your coffee?"

Mr. Trotter: "Because I think the strong should help the weak."

Eric Dawson: "They call him Annie Laurie, for

"Like winds in summer sighing,
His voice is low and sweet."

Dr. Leavell to Mr. Reed: "What is a Society, Mr. Reed?"

Mr. Reed: "Going to see Sallie is Society."

Edna Bufkin: "There is not but one thing in the world I like better than ham, and that is Cham."

Robert Mitchell: "If dissipation interferes with your business, give up your business."

Lynette Kimmons: "She has such a graceful step—one which Angels might envy."

Kyle Cooper: "The hardest work an energetic man can do is to loaf."

Mr. Farley: "Conservative men are like paper-weights—they hold things down, but seldom move."

Ben Beall said: "Some men are poor, lots of them are stupid, most of them are ugly—and all of them are conceited, but nevertheless they are as indispensable as I am."

Pete Stubblefield said as a verse in Sunday school one day: "Now abides faith, hope, Grace—these three, but the greatest of these is Grace."

Powell Plant—His name should be Century Plant, as he blooms out only once in a hundred years.

Sively Rhodes: "The most fortunate man is he who only has a single ideal. He may have a long hunt ahead, but some day he will meet the woman who exactly suits him."

"Bondy" (to his wife): "Really, my dear, do you think that all this going to these clubs improves you?" "Yes," she said; "I am beginning to learn how insignificant man is."

Lake Robertson: "It is not what you know you know, but what others think you know, that counts."

"Stupidity in a woman is an inexcusable shortcoming, but ugliness is an unpardonable sin." Fan Mitchell: "I don't care; Jay loves me."

Chalmers Williamson said: "A man without a few evil intentions is like lingeries without lace—uninteresting."

N. R. Sledge and J. Niles:

"Heights by great men reached and kept,
Were not attained by sudden flight.
But they, while their companions slept,
Were roaming the campus at night."

Mr. Buckley (to his father): "Papa, what is hope?" Father: "Son, hope is what is left." "Then, papa, is Hazel Hope all that's left?"

Preacher (to Mr. Christian): "Are you a good man?" Mr. C.: "No, I can't say that I am." Preacher: "I hope you aren't very bad?" Mr. C.: "No, just comfortable."

Mr. Greek Leavell (to Marie Kimmons): "What is your favorite wild game?" Marie: "Oh! foot ball, of course."

Mr. Bishop thinks that marriage would be like a charity bazaar—the admission fee would be very small, but it would cost all he had before he could get out; therefore, he won't get in."

Freshman (to Mr. Woods): "Why did you tell me yesterday when you were in English Room that it had three doors in it? I could only find one." Tooty: "Why both my ears are cupidores."

George Johnson (to Dollye): "My love for you is as boundless as the ocean." Dollye: "Yes, that is the trouble; I want to go to Europe."

Wilson Moore. Before the game with Sewanee he was Wilson Moore, afterwards he was Wilson Less.

Mr. Chase: "He walks as if he treads on eggs."

Orin Poindexter: "He walks by the White ways of life."

Catherine Dunbar: "I do not think I shall ever get married, because I had rather my sweetheart's love would convalesce without me, than with me."

Mr. Coon: "If the man in the moon were Mr. Coon, all the girls would buy a balloon."

"Sug" Edwards can show you the secret of smiling sweetly, especially when Dr. Brown calls on him in French. Then he smiles most sweetly, and that's all he does.

Joe Bell. They asked Little Joe, when he came to the University, how old he was. "Well," he said, "I'm five at home, six at school, and four in the ears."

Akin Brooke: "They call me 'Babbling Brook' because I talk so much."

But I'll have to stop now, or my book will be too long. Therefore, with best wishes to everyone, I'll say good-bye.—William Shakespeare."

ELIZABETH PRICE.

Prof. Johnson (to Chandler)—"Mr. Chandler, what is cohesion?"
Chandler—"Personal experience."

"Bunny" Bigham (talking of Mrs. Chilton's and the Glee Club's approaching entertainments).

Co-ed (hmming)—"Why don't you spend something else besides the evening?"

There's a girl at the Hall—Annie Bell,
Who, while walking down Varsity street, fell;
 She got up with a bound,
 And looked all around,
And said in a deep voice, "Oh, H——!"

Patterson, a young chemistry tough,
While mixing a compounded stuff,
 Dropped a match in the vial,
 And after a while
They found his front tooth and one cuff.

Jamie Acker went home in a hansom,
He had been out all evening to dansom:
 And he sighed, "Well, that's queer;
 There is no keyhole here!"
So he threw his hat over the transom.

There was a young doctor named Gunn,
Who vowed he would have some fun;
 So a-fishing he went
 With a pin that was bent,
And caught—himself in the thumb.

There was a Freshman named Sage;
He was the seer of his age;
 He woke up one night
 After a booze fight,
And saw a snake in a cage.

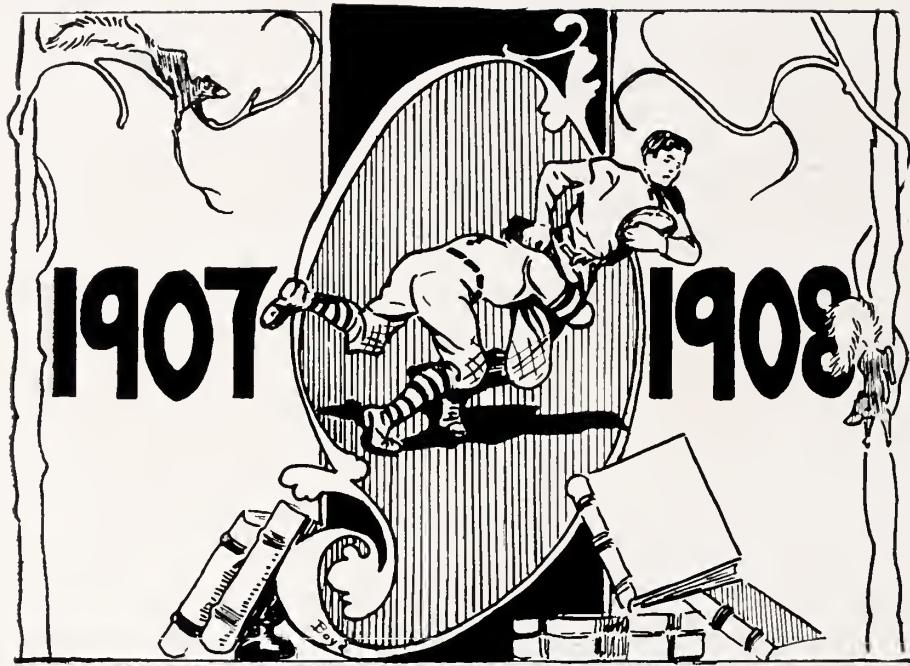

There is a student named Holland,
A man of portly mien;
After he leaves the table
 There is nothing to be seen.

Another young fellow, Gillespie,
Is a sport, I will be bound:
Whenever he visits the city
 He buys all the red hose in town.

Withers is an inquisitive brat,
Whose questions the profs. all evade;
 One day on a charade
 He asked a prof.'s aid,
And he said, "Any fool should know that."

A certain young man named Pete
Thought he was very discreet,
 Till he met a sweet girl,
 Now his brain's in a whirl,
And he can't tell his head from his feet.

A certain young fellow, L. P. Jones,
Who is trying to learn French tones,
 One day grew quite red,
 Because Dr. Brown said:
Mrs. Jones and Miss Smith as common names shone.

Council of Honor

As a result of the efforts of Chancellor Kinneannon, the Council of Honor was formed on November 6, 1907, after much discussion among the students. The Council has as its object the eradication of many of the evils which have existed at the University for many years, prominent among which are gambling, drinking and drunkenness.

Though Chancellor Kinneannon aided in the formation of the Council, the student-body deserves most of the credit, for it procured the rough draft from the hands of the Chancellor, modified it, adopted it, and then finally gave to the Council the permanency which betokens a long life of usefulness.

The Council is constructed upon a purely representative plan, each class of each department being represented. The classes and departments are represented as follows: Senior Academic, 5; Senior Law, 3; Junior Law, 2; Junior Academic, 2; Sophomore Academic, 2; Freshman Academic, 2; Engineering Department, 2, and Medical Department, 2.

Toast

To the Y. M. C. A.

In cold water, fresh from some ambitious little spring that sparkles in its purity like a many-sided crystal revolving in the sunlight, bringing coolness to the parched throat, joy to the heart and the light of new life into the eyes of many a weary sojourner across the hot sands of life's plains—more refreshing than wine; more beautiful than anything else in the world—we propose a toast to you, the Young Men's Christian Association of the University:

Here's to thy continued success. May thy usefulness increase; may thy influence be multiplied many-fold; may the hands of those that serve thee be always strong and white; may their hearts be pure; may thy home be indeed a place of cheer for students who have moments of loneliness away from their own hearthstones; may thy service be one of ministry to those who are sick; mayest thou continue to encourage students in their work and inspire them to greater endeavor; mayest thou always strive to create a wholesome college spirit, be a strong ally of athletics, fostering all clean college activities and in everything seeking to create a sentiment that shall make for righteousness in our midst; mayest thou see the kingdom of Christ come into the hearts of many who shall rise up to call thee blessed.

Act I. Scene I.

Enter the Chewing Gum Chorus, singing:

"Beware our smiles are wary, boys,
And if you've got the dough,
Just grab us by the arms, boys,
A large time to us show.
We like to spend the coin, boys,
Our appetites to fill,
So make a sound like handling cash,
And we will fill the bill.
Oh, Fudge—."

Enter the Candy Kids, singing:

"Now, look here, girls, let's take a stroll,
From here to Uncle 'Topp's';
We'll make the cream and sodas fly,
For all of us are fops.
And if you want a five-pound box,
Give us now your bids,
For we uphold the simple name,
Of 'Nutty Candy Kids,'"

Confusion.

As they march out, Chewing Gum Chorus sings:

"A Candy Kid and a Chewing Gum—
Away we go, to spend the dough
Of these soft snaps, you see;
And if you find another kind,
Won't you send him to me?
But by and by, so hard he'll try,
To win our fickle heart.
But we are young, and he is stung:
We've acted well our part."

Exeunt. Curtain.

Scene II.

Enter the Candy Kids, singing.

"Alas! Alas! Alack!
They gave us our hearts back;
O look at what a lemon
The girls they handed me.
They pasted on our suit-cases
The sign of Twenty-three.
We sorrow at our losses,
And yet, we ain't no more;
But still, it's hard for us to hear,
'O yes! I told you so.'
It's S-T-U-N-G,
And G-U-R-E-Z;
But we won't fret, we'll all forget
The Foolish Chewing Gums."

Exeunt. Curtain.

EXPRESS YOUR SENTIMENTS IN SHORT, ORIGINAL VERSE.

The Freshman is green;
The Soph. wishes his knowledge to be seen;
The Junior of exams, has a dread;
The Senior has the big head.

—BERTHA ROARK.

Here's to Riley; drink it down, boys;
Here's to the history bell;
Here's to the tyrant who kills our joys;
Here's to our "dips" farewell.

—C. M. PHIPPS.

If in your loyal college career
Lessons and card games interfere;
Give up the former and cleave to the latter,
For life is short, so what does it matter?

"TIP" RAY.

Math. is very interesting
Under "Allie," "Nick" and Bell;
A sweet combination,
Which makes the subject —!

—ANON. THOUGHT TO BE A FRESHMAN.

J. Clarence was a student fair;
A lady's man was he, I swear;
With hair so light, at perfect ease,
He called—several times—on Miss K—.

—H. T. BUCKLEY.

Like autumn leaves that once were green,
But turned at last to yellow;
The Sophomore was fresh enough,
But is now a sorry fellow.

—C. G. PAYNE.

Life is what you make it;
Be a wise lad and take it;
It presents to you a dilemma—
Either be skinned or be a Skinner.

—J. G. GILLESPIE.

O Odum, with blushes and smiles,
In Sophomore Latin, I want the rise;
In Latin constructions you are the best,
Altho' you are so very modest.

—A. B. TERRY.

Chew gum, by gum!
Buy gum, chew gum.

—WALTON.

I think Dr. Riley's "whys?"
Are not like peach pies,
And to me they bring sighs,
For I'm afraid I won't get the rise.

—MARIE EMMA HUGHSTON.

A Freshman is not without honor, save at the University.

—FRESHMAN GRESHAM.

The Freshman is green, that's no fault;
The Sophomore is lazy, strives for naught;
The Junior is proud, his pride will fall;
The Senior—well, he knows it all.

—E. N. LIGON.

There was a young fellow named Foose,
Whose pants were exceeding l——
 One day, up in town,
 They started to come d——
 Which caused young Foose to vamoose.

—L. P. JONES.

He (the Senior) dreamed that he stood mid the last conflagration,
 And laughed at the flames as they leaped ever higher;
For was he not one of the best of the nation,
 And, like the saints of the furnace, immune to the fire.

—S. O. PRICE.

Hold your head high—look proud;
When you speak, speak loud;
Then if you are not the d—— fool,
 You are the prince of the crowd.

—S. P. STUBBLEFIELD.

Write a poem or a story
 For the annual, if you can;
Then you're on the road to glory:
 You will be a famous man.

—C. W. ROBINSON.

First Fresh. Co-Ed—"Did Francis Bacon write this piece?"

Second Fresh. Co-Ed—"I don't know; does she board at the Hall?"

Mims (seeing a train of oil cars pass)—"Gosh, just look at the boilers."

Yell:

Wing of an owl,
Leg of a gnat,
Tail of a cow,
Horn of a bat,
Bag of peanuts,
Tongue of a shoe;
Hurrah! Hurrah! for the Odum Blues.

Little Bob Ingram sat in a corner,
Watching his chips mount high;
He sat awhile, grinning,
Then said, "Ha! I'm winning;
What a wizard at poker am I."

Prof. Bishop, a man from Ostend,
Just vowed he'd hold out to the end,
But when half way over
From Calais to Dover,
He done what he didn't intend.

The class called Senior Laws
All strengthened and primed their claws,
To give Uncle Tommy a raking;
But when they were through,
Their claws, they were blue,
And they went home shaking.

"Prep," Roberson was a jolly lad,
To whom lessons never seemed bad;
He simply threw away his books
And studied his own good looks.

Two maidens were seated at tea,
Discussing the things that may be.
"I think I'll wed Beanie,"
Said Alma to Genie;
"That is, if he asks me, you see."

There is a professor named Leavell,
And his thoughts, they never revel;
He takes no sass
From any of the class,
And always gives "Pug" Withers the devil.

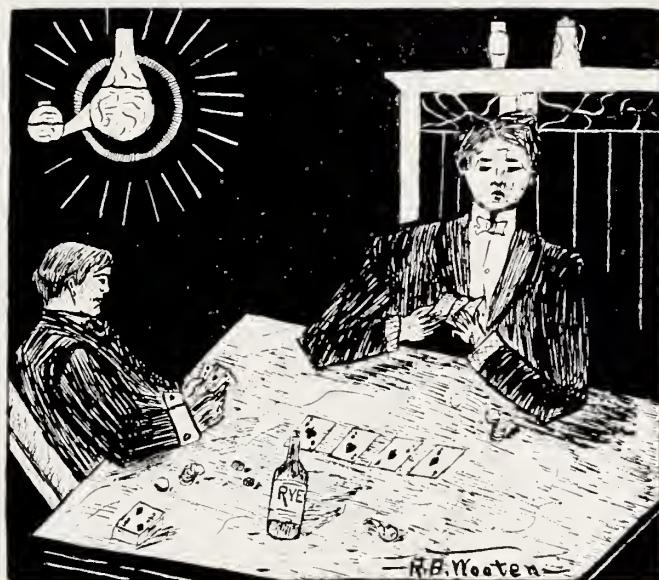

Hal Johnson, they say, is a happy lad,
And usually has smiles to burn,
But he often gets mad
And tries to play bad
When his thoughts to Junior English turn.

Of all sad words, which are or seem:
These in baseball
Are saddest of all:
"If I had made the team."

A young man by the name of Bell
Went round the streets ringing a bell;
When asked why he rang it,
He said: "Why, goll-dang it:
Can't you see, I've got things to sell?"

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT OF VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

SESSION opens September, 1907, and closes May, 1908. Requirement for admission, High School Diploma or equivalent. Special attention given to bedside work. We own and maintain our own hospital, in the wards of which the junior and senior classes are taken in sections each afternoon, and given bedside instruction. Students attending two years in the Medical Department of the University of Mississippi can enter the junior class of Vanderbilt, without entrance examination, and receive credit for work done in Mississippi. The reason of this is that both colleges belong to the Association of American Medical Colleges.
